

Terlato Family Vineyards

Anthony J. Terlato, Chairman - "Consider quality a way of life, we do."

A true visionary, Anthony J. Terlato has led the evolution of the fine wine industry for more than half a century. Whether the role has been retailer, distributor, importer, marketer or winery and vineyard owner, Terlato has achieved success at every level of the wine industry. Throughout this legacy, he has remained true to a simple principle: Put quality first, because only quality endures. As Chairman of Terlato Wine Group (TWG), the parent company of several businesses specializing in the marketing and production of exceptional wines, Terlato's passion for quality is evident in every bottle of wine the company markets and produces. His career — and passion for wine — began in 1955 at his father's retail wine and spirits store on Chicago's north side. In 1956, he joined his father-in-law's wine-bottling firm, Pacific Wine Company. Terlato earned the title of "Father of Pinot Grigio" when he introduced Santa Margherita Pinot Grigio to America in 1979. Today, Pinot Grigio is the most popular imported varietal and Santa Margherita Pinot Grigio is the most popular luxury wine in U.S. history. One out of every eight bottles of wine over $14 sold in America comes from the TWI portfolio.

TWG now includes the family's investments in vineyards, wine production joint ventures and wineries in some of the world's most esteemed wine regions. Beside Rutherford Hill, TWG fully owns Chimney Rock Winery (Stags Leap, Napa Valley), Terlato Vineyards (Napa Valley and Sonoma) and holds a majority interest in Sanford Winery (Santa Barbara) and Alderbrook Vineyards (Sonoma County). The company also has interests in M. Chapoutier (Rhône Valley), plus joint ventures in Australia (Domaine Terlato & Chapoutier). In January 2003, Wine Enthusiast Magazine honored Terlato as its "Man of the Year." In presenting him with its most prestigious award, the editors credited him with "changing the way Americans drink" by bringing quality Italian wines to the United States.

Terlato's passion for excellence can also be found in his company's corporate headquarters, Tangley Oaks, the Tudor-Gothic mansion built by Philip D. Armour, III, in Lake Bluff, Illinois, in 1916. The 26,000-square-foot mansion sits on six-and-a-half acres overlooking a large pond and is adorned with exquisite antiques, art and tapestries. It was named to the National Register of Historic Places in 1996 after the Terlato family's two-year restoration of the property.
